KUSUDAMA is a decorative paper ball for festive occasions. Originally it was an ornamental scent bag hung to clear away noxious vapors, thus the name "KUSU" (medicine) + "DAMA" (ball). Origami works are usually made from one piece of square paper, but Kusudama Origami is different. It combines several units of origami. Folding each piece and then joining the units with the completed ball in mind is an enjoyable process. No intricate methods are involved; folding and joining the units is simple and easy.

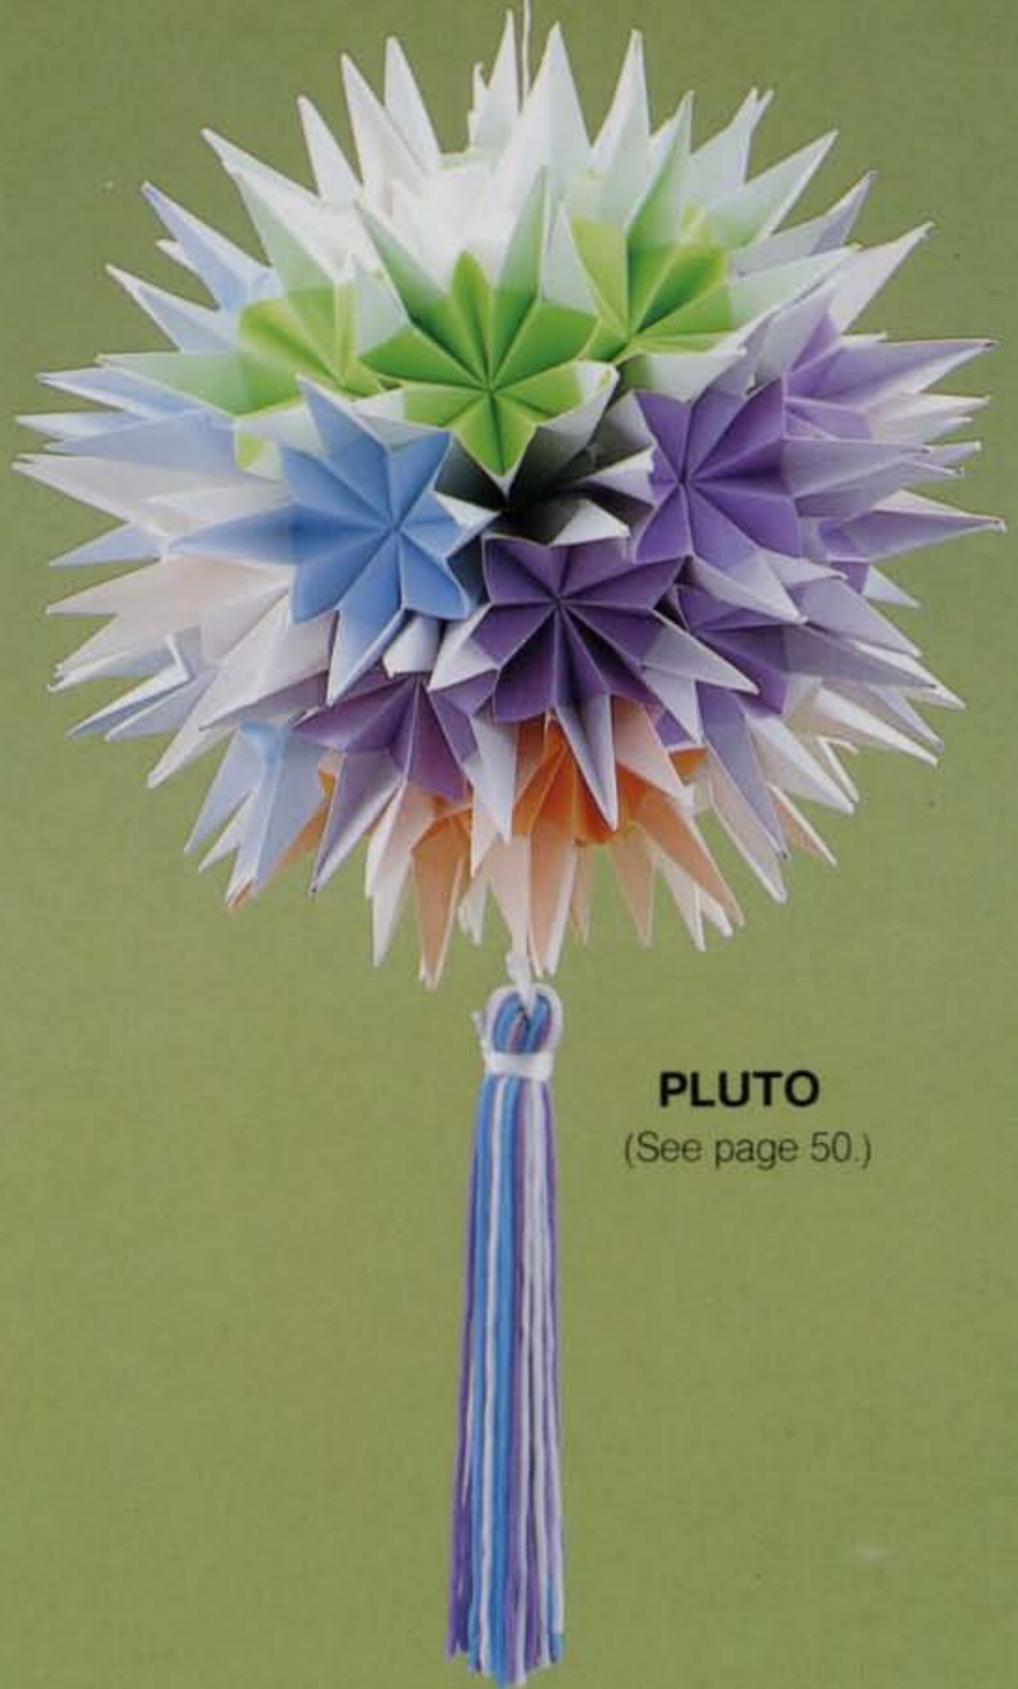

This is a basic book for beginners. The step-by-step illustrations are clear, and there is no guesswork. A completed Kusudama makes a wonderful present, and is indispensable as a Christmas decoration.

1

Open the string with the bunch of yarn and put a group of assembled units on it.

2

First, insert the marked string into any slit of the units and then the other string in the following order: the second string into the second slit from the first string, the third string into the third slit from the second string, and the fourth string into the second slit from the third string.

3

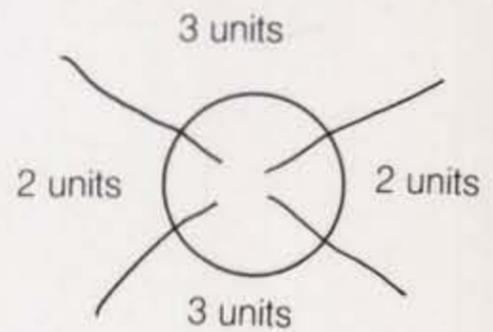

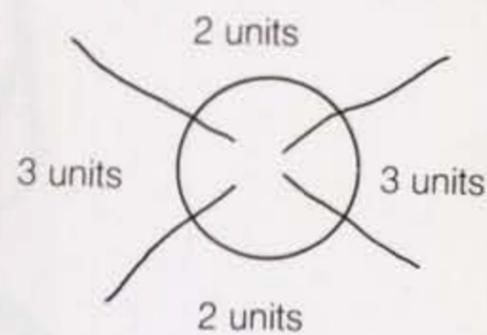

Put the second group of units on top of the first group, and thread the marked string through the second group, and the other strings in the following order: the second string into the third slit, the third string into the second slit, and the fourth string into the third slit.

4

FIRST & THIRD GROUPS

SECOND & FOURTH GROUPS

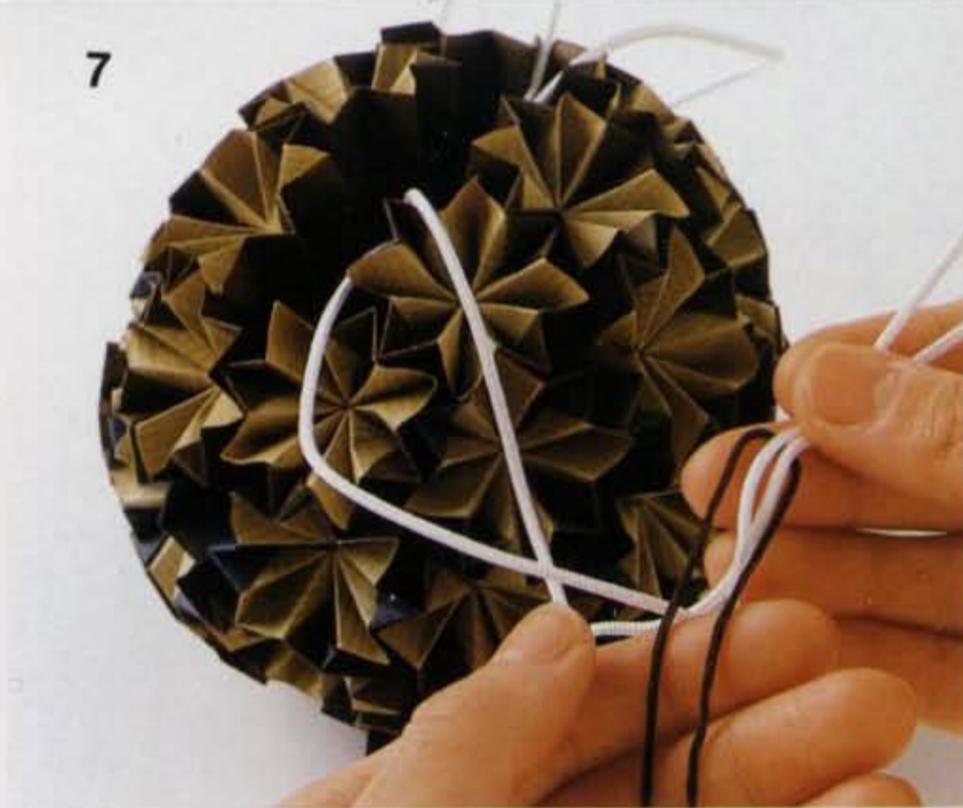

Put the third and fourth groups and thread the strings as illustrated.

5

Pull the strings one by one and shape the whole carefully.

7

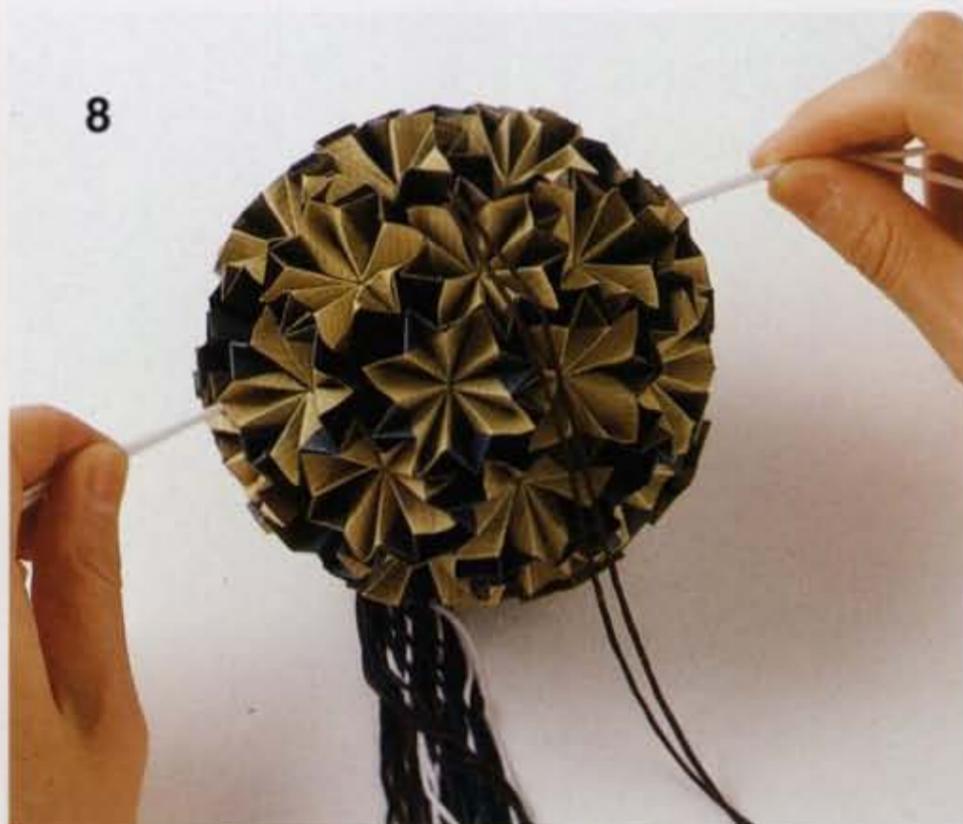

Thread the string through the loop of the hanger.

6

Hold each of two strings together and make a loose knot in the center and pull the string slowly. When the knot comes to the base, fasten it tightly so that the whole makes a round ball.

8

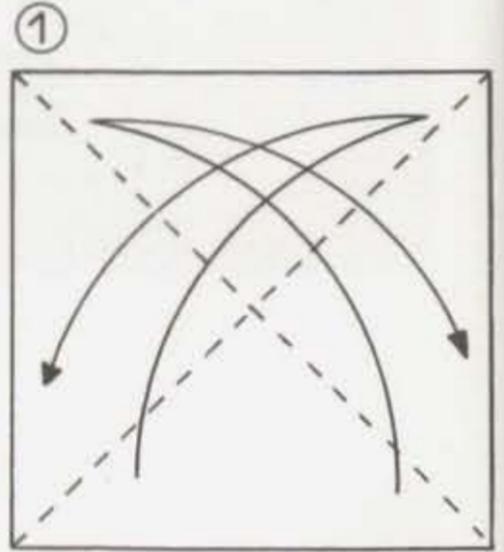

Tie twice firmly as in step 6.

9

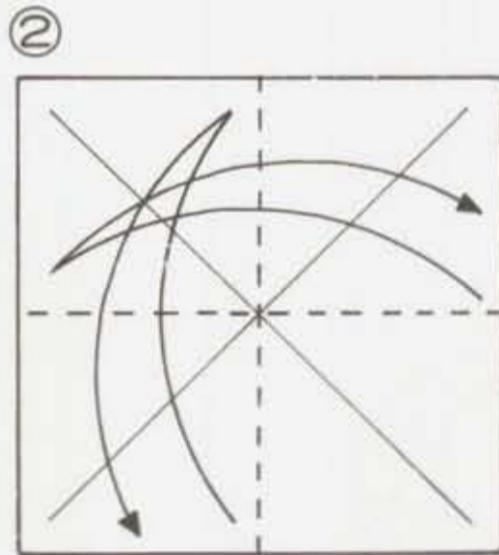

Cut the strings near the base. Completed.
